Today we continued working on telling time en español! One difference between telling time in Spanish versus English is time in the hour of 1 is singular (es la) since there is only one hour. All other time is said in the plural (son las) since there is more than one hour.

Notas Culturales

You might have noticed or heard that some Spaniards tend to say gracias by softly lisping the c (sounds like 'grathias' or 'Barthelona') while in other parts of the Spanish-speaking world people pronounce the c as an s (sounds like 'grasias' or 'Bar-sell-ona'). Can you think of any areas in the United States that pronounce things differently than other areas?
