

Notas Culturales

- ❖ When talking about an occupation you do not need to use un or una when using Soy. For example: Soy doctora.
- ❖ It is important to explain to your class how occupations do not define people in Latin America the way they often do in the United States. For example: If you ask someone in Peru what they do, they would likely answer with their hobbies, " I ride bikes. I read and I cook." In the United States, this would typically be answered with a career, "I am a teacher. I am a doctor, etc."
- ❖ After playing the Di of Fortune, ask your students if they think game shows are popular in Latin America. Then give your students a little "trabajo". Ask them to go home and see if they can find a channel on the t.v. that speaks Spanish. Ask them to report what they see. Did they see any game shows?
