5. NOTA CULTURAL. Cultural note: difference between TÚ/USTED

- Tú and usted are both Spanish words for “you”, but they each carry a different level of respect.
- Usted is the more formal version. It's used when referring to someone who is an acquaintance, of a higher status, or even simply just older.
- Tú is informal. Think of it as a casual use of the word “you”. It finds its way into conversations between friends, family members, and other people you have a social connection with beyond a professional setting.
- The easiest way to determine when to use formal or informal versions of you is to compare it to instances where you would use “sir” or “madam”. Most of us wouldn't address our boss informally, nor would we address a stranger on the street like our friends. There is a certain boundary between a formal interaction and an informal one that is innately understood.
